(Induced Patent Infringement Under 35 U.S.C. § 271)

- 50. Plaintiff incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 49 above as though fully set forth herein.
- 51. Upon information and belief, in violation of 35 U.S.C. §§271(a), 271(b), and/or 271(c), Defendant DOES 1-10 have infringed directly and continue to infringe the U.S. Patent No. 6,263,884 B1 (hereinafter the '884 patent) by practicing one or more of the claims of the '884 patent in consumer use of infringing product Ponytailer product line, including but not limited to the "Scunci Ponytailer."

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(Trademark Infringement)

- 64. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 63 above as though fully set forth herein.
 - 65. Plaintiff is the owner of the registered mark "Tonytail®".
- 66. Upon information and belief, Defendants have displayed for sale its Scunci Ponytail Holder in commerce in a retail display location labeled for Plaintiff's registered mark product, thereby creating consumer confusion with Plaintiff's mark. The use of "Tonytail®" mark on sales display materials to offer for sale the Scunci "Ponytailer or Ponytail Holder" causes substantial consumer confusion in commerce.
- 67. The use of the sales display materials labeled "Tonytail®" by defendants in commerce is likely to cause confusion as to the source, origin or sponsorship of the infringing device, inducing consumers to purchase such a device believing it to be Plaintiff's products protected by its registered mark.
- Upon information and belief, Defendants intended to cause confusion as to the source, origin, or sponsorship of the Plaintiff's device by selling its "Ponytailer" marked goods on the same retail hook as Plaintiff's marked goods and unfairly under the same trademark name as Plaintiff's marked goods.
- 69. Defendants' use in commerce of the name "Tonytail®" infringes Plaintiff's registered trademark "Tonytail" and is in violation of the Title 15, U.S.C. § 1114.

FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(Violation of Federal Lanham Act; False Designation of Origin Under 15 U.S.C. §1125)

- misappropriated Plaintiff's intellectual property rights as a result of its sale of the Ponytailer infringing product line design when it had reason to know that such infringing device design was the unregistered design trade dress of Plaintiff. In its efforts to solicit purchasers for the sale of said infringing device design, Defendants have willfully committed a false designation of origin with respect to Plaintiff's intellectual property in the form of Plaintiff's unregistered design trade dress, the Tonytail®, thereby causing substantial consumer confusion.
- 74. Said false designation of origin was and is without the consent, either explicit or implied, of Plaintiff.
- 75. The product design trade dress Tonytail® ponytail wrap has been the subject of substantial efforts to acquire and maintain its distinctiveness, including infringing devices design patents D 413,693, D 453,239 and the subsequent infringing device design trade dress embodied in the overall look and appearance of Plaintiff's protected device.
- 76. The infringing device design of Defendant's Scunci Ponytailer device line and its false designation by Defendants caused by selling Scunci products on the "Tonytail" retail hooks is likely to cause consumer confusion.
 - 77. The product design trade dress Tonytail ponytail wrap has been the subject of substantial efforts to acquire and maintain its distinctive product design, including product design patents 'D693 and 'D239 and the subsequent infringing device design trade dress embodied in the overall look and appearance of Plaintiff's protected device.

- 78. Defendants' use of the "Tonytail" trade dress device design is in violation of Title 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a).
- 79. Defendants' misappropriation and unfair use of the protected device design trade dress in interstate commerce was a commercial use of the mark within the meaning of the statute. Further, the Defendants' bad faith use by unfairly passing off its Ponytailer infringing device design to confused consumers prevented them from being able to buy the true "Tonytail". Such use by Defendants was not approved by Plaintiff and as part of Plaintiff's protected product design trade dress, constitutes a false designation of origin for the misappropriation of Plaintiff's rights. As a direct result of Defendants' attempt at passing off Plaintiff's property as its own and therefore is actionable under § 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a).
- 80. Defendants have acted recklessly, willfully and purposefully with the intention of misleading the public into believing that it owned all of the rights to Plaintiff's protected product design trade dress, which has resulted in substantial consumer confusion and significant lost revenue and profits for the Plaintiff.
- 81. Defendants and their successors in interest have had and continue to have notice of the existence of the device design trade dress due to its previously executed 2003 settlement and license agreement with Plaintiff for its 'D453,239 design patent and despite such notice continue to willfully, wantonly and deliberately engage in acts of infringement as that term is defined under § 43(a) of the Lanham Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a), without regard to the 'D453,239 protected device design and the corresponding device design trade dress, and will continue to do so unless otherwise enjoined by this court
- 82. Defendants' misappropriation and false designation of origin of Plaintiff's unregistered device design trade dress intellectual property as Defendants' own was, and is, willful, reckless and outrageous because of Defendants' purposeful motive and reckless indifference to the rights of Plaintiff.

83. Plaintiff has been and will continue to be damaged by Defendants' false designation of origin.

PERMANENT INJUNCTION - 35 U.S.C. §283

- 84. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 83 above as though fully set forth herein.
- 85. In addition to monetary damages, Plaintiff seeks a permanent injunction to prevent Defendants from continued infringement of Plaintiff's patents, trademark and trade dress product design.
- 86. Because of Defendants' infringement, Plaintiffs have been, and will continue to suffer irreparable injury, for which the remedies available at law provide inadequate compensation. Defendants' infringement thus warrants a remedy in equity and such remedy will not disserve public interest.
- Unless enjoined, Defendants will continue to infringe and induce infringement of the 'D693 Patent, 'D239 Patent, '884 Patent, registered trademark "Tonytail" and trade dress product design.
- 88. Based on the foregoing and on Plaintiff's valid and enforceable patent rights, Plaintiff has a reasonable likelihood of succeeding on the merits.
- 89. Plaintiff owns all rights to the manufacture, marketing and distribution of products which fall within the scope of its patents. Therefore, continued infringement will cause irreparable harm to Plaintiff, if a permanent injunction is not granted.
- 90. Plaintiff's business and business income is predicated on its exclusive rights to manufacture market and distribute products which fall within the scope of its patents. Whereas Defendants' business interests encompass a wider variety of products and/or practices, they have wider sources of income.
- 91. Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff readily satisfies the burden of a permanent injunction.

SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION

18

19

20

21

22

23

- 92. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 91 above as though fully set forth herein.
- 93. Defendants Conair/Scunci and Rite Aid knowingly and intentionally produced and marketed hair accessories that unfairly were confusingly similar to Plaintiff's "Tonytail" product design trade dress.
- 94. Defendants Conair/Scunci knowingly and intentionally produced and marketed hair accessories that fell within the scope of patent protections secured by Plaintiff. The substantial similarity of the Scunci/Conair infringing products constitutes a violation of Plaintiff's patent rights under Title 35 §271. Due to Defendants alleged patent infringement and other intellectual property law violations of 15 U.S.C. §1114 and 15 U.S.C. §1125, Defendants have acted unlawfully within the meaning of B&P §§17200 et. seq.
- 95. Defendants continuously engaged in unfair trade practices and unfair competition against Plaintiff. It violated the patent, trademark and trade dress laws and harms competition. Unlawful conduct is an unfair business practice actionable under the UCL, B&P §§17200 et. seq.
- 96. Scunci's infringing products were offered for sale in Rite Aid stores, commingled on shelves and other forms of display with other Scunci and Tonytail devices. The hooks in the stores bore the Tonytail® mark and designation, and had Scunci infringing devices displayed on them. The hooks which were labeled as Scunci Ponytailer had Tonytail® devices displayed. Further, when Defendants provided the Scunci Ponytailer infringing device design in product display locations designated for the Tonytail® device line, it intended to falsely designate the origin of such goods as its own and not that of Plaintiff's, thereby fraudulently designating such origin of the goods. This manner of promotion was deceptive, and had the tendency to mislead the public into believing that Scunci produced the Tonytail, was one and the same company or that Scunci infringing devices were approved by, or otherwise associated with the Plaintiff.

- 97. Upon information and belief, due to Defendants' unlawful patent, trademark and trade dress infringement, as well as fraudulent sales practices, Defendants' alleged infringing devices were sold in the very location of Plaintiff's patented and trade dress protected devices thereby causing substantial damages and irreparable harm to Plaintiff. Further, consumers were deceived leading to overall consumer confusion in the market for these goods. Plaintiff's ability to compete was thereby significantly impaired and buyers subsequently abandoned negotiations further leading to irreparable harm.
- 98. Plaintiff has been, and will continue to be irreparably harmed and injured by Defendants' efforts designed to unfairly compete with Plaintiff in violation of Business and Professions Code §§17200 et. seq.

SEVENTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(Common Law Unfair Business Practices)

- 99. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 98 above as though fully set forth herein.
- 100. The Plaintiff Tonytail Company has invested substantial time and money in the development of its proprietary device lines, patented devices, market knowledge, trademarked goods, and trade dress device design of the Tonytail® device line and the Tonytail patents. This property constitutes the basis of Plaintiff's business goodwill and reputation.
- 101. Defendants Conair/Scunci copied not only protectable elements but the entire invention of the Tonytail®. Conair/Scunci's infringing products, such as the Ponytailer product line was offered for sale in Rite Aid stores, after the limited 6- month license granted to L&N Sales & Marketing had expired and Conair had subsequently acquired the Scunci infringing devices and name. The alleged imitations are substantially similar, leading to many consumers actually confusing the brands when considering the degree of care and attention likely to be exercised by the purchaser. Nevertheless, the alleged imitations were intentionally offered for sale, commingled on hooks with the Tonytail devices. The hooks in the stores which bore the protected Tonytail marks and device designation actually were unfairly replaced with Scunci infringing devices contained on them under the false designation of Plaintiff's protected trademark. Further, the hooks which had the Scunci name had the protected Tonytail trademarked products displayed, leading to substantial consumer confusion. Moreover, the confusingly similar infringing device design of the alleged imitation created further consumer confusion over the source of Plaintiff's protected trade dress device design. These trademark and trade dress violations substantially confuse consumers and cause them to believe that Conair/Scunci are in some way associated with Plaintiff.

102. The consuming public was in fact misled, resulting in diminished sales of the Plaintiff's device and finally in the cancellation of the contractual relationship between plaintiff and Rite Aid and plaintiff's sales to Rite Aid. Further, the misleading sales and marketing tactics have led to substantial consumer confusion and irreparable harm to Plaintiff's business reputation.

103. Plaintiff has been, and will continue to be irreparably injured by Defendants' efforts designed to unfairly compete with Plaintiff in violation of California common law because it unfairly created consumer confusion and the dilution of Plaintiff's own goodwill and business reputation.

EIGHTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(Injury to Business Reputation and Trade Libel)

104. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 103 above as though fully set forth herein.

105. After meeting with Rite Aid at the NACDS Marketplace in June 2004, and Mia Minnelli's first application for Rite Aid vendor status on or about July 8, 2004, Tonytail continuously supplied Defendant with Tonytail devices on the basis of an oral agreement. Furthermore, Tonytail had entered into negotiations with other mass chain retailers that had expressed a high degree of interest in Tonytail® devices.

106. Dowell Group on behalf of Rite Aid reassured Tonytail that their business relationship would be enduring. Also the high interest that other buyers expressed at the NACDS marketplace and the negotiations the potential customers contemplated constituted a solid basis for Tonytail's reasonable expectations of economic gain because no other device designs, ornamental appearances, or functional device features were found in the relevant market for these goods at the time. Moreover, no competing devices or designs incorporated the patented and protected intellectual property features, as evidenced by the facts that prior art searches and trademark searches were conducted and Plaintiff's devices, designs and marks were found to be novel and distinct when compared to the prior art.

107. Defendants Conair/Scunci have not only copied protectable elements but the entire invention of the Tonytail® product. These infringing devices were offered for sale in Rite Aid stores, commingled on shelves and other forms of display with other Scunci and Tonytail® devices. The hooks in the stores which bore the Tonytail® name and designation had Scunci infringing devices on them, and the hooks which had the Scunci name had Tonytail devices displayed.

108. Defendants' manner of promotion was deceptive, and had the tendency to mislead the public into believing that Scunci produced the Tonytail, was one and the same company or that Scunci infringing products were approved by, or otherwise associated with the Plaintiff.

109. Regardless of whether the public was in fact misled, Plaintiff has been, and will continue to be irreparably injured by Defendants' efforts designed and/or likely to create injury to Plaintiff's business reputation and dilution of the distinctive quality of Plaintiff's protectable intellectual property. Plaintiff experienced diminished sales of Plaintiff's device which resulted finally in the cancellation of the contractual relationship between plaintiff and Rite Aid and plaintiff's sales to Rite Aid.

NINTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(Common Law Trademark Dilution)

110. Plaintiff hereby incorporates the allegations of paragraphs 1 through 109 above as though fully set forth herein.

CASE NO.

COMPLAINT FOR PATENT INFRINGEMENT

1	111. Tonytail has the exclusive right to use its intellectual property, its highly
2	distinctive trademark and trade name, for identification, sale and advertising. Plaintiff
3	registered its fictitious business name "Tonytail" with the Secretary of State of the State of
4	California and owns the name's registered word mark.
5	112. Defendants' actions as set forth hereinabove have been and are likely to impair the
6	distinctiveness of Plaintiff's protectable mark. Scunci's infringing products were offered for
7	sale in Rite Aid stores, commingled on shelves and other forms of display with other Scunci
8	and Tonytail devices. The hooks in the stores which bore the Tonytail name and designation
9	had Scunci infringing products on them, and the hooks which had the Scunci name had
10	Tonytail devices displayed.
11	113. This manner of promotion was deceptive and had the tendency to mislead the
12	public into believing that Scunci produced the Tonytail, was one and the same company or that
13	Scunci infringing devices were approved by, or otherwise associated with the Plaintiff.
14	114. The likelihood that customers are confused by this sales method is tremendous
15	because of the proximity of the Scunci and the Tonytail merchandise, the actual confusion
16	expressed by customers and store employees, the common marketing channels, the akin type of
17	goods and low degree of care likely to be exercised by the purchaser.
18	115. Defendant's actions as set forth hereinabove have harmed and are likely to harm
19	the reputation of Plaintiff's mark. Plaintiff has been, and will continue to be irreparably injured
20	by Defendant's efforts designed and/or likely to create injury to Plaintiff's business reputation
21	and dilution of the distinctive quality of Plaintiff's protectable intellectual property

FACTS COMMON TO ALL CAUSES OF ACTION

- 12. In or about the fall of 1997, Mia Minnelli founded The Tonytail Company, Inc. and its hair product accessory line. Minnelli, is the sole shareholder of The Tonytail Company, Inc., being one of the few female CEOs in a male-dominated industry with a mainly female target consumer group.

holders for sale at various retail locations.

- 22. The Scunci Ponytail Holder, for example item 28398-A", is substantially similar to Plaintiff's ponytail holder device, which is the subject of U.S. Patent No. D453,239 and No. Des. 413,693 because it includes ornamental features that would induce a consumer to purchase Defendant's products believing them to be Plaintiff's patented design. The manufacture, sale, offer for sale, and use of the Scunci ponytailers and ponytail holders also induce infringement of one or more claims of Plaintiff's U.S. Patent No. U.S. 6,263,884 B1 that includes each and every limitation found in the one or more claims of Plaintiff's '884 patent.
- 23. At various times after March 31, 2003, and continuing to the present, Defendants manufactured and sold additional products such as the "Scunci Ponytail Holder", and these devices were displayed and sold by defendant Rite Aid in one or more of its multiple retail outlets in California, and specifically in the Northern District of California.
- 24. At the National Association of Chain Drug Stores (NACDS) tradeshow in June 2004, where The Tonytail Company, Inc. presented these products, Mia Minnelli met with other mass chain retailers who expressed high interest in the Tonytail product. Also immediately after this June 2004 NACDS tradeshow, The Tonytail Company, Inc. entered into an oral supply agreement with Rite Aid.
- 25. The Scunci infringing products were offered at Rite Aid stores commingled on shelves and other forms of display with Tonytail and other Scunci products. The hooks bore the Scunci name displaying Tonytail products and vice versa.
- 26. ConAir/Scunci influenced other potential commercial consumers to abandon their negotiations with Tonytail. ConAir/Scunci knowingly and intentionally influenced buyers to sell defendants' infringing products, and also to not do business with Plaintiff in order to preserve Defendant's predominance in these retail stores. Defendant knew or should have known that retailers would reject Tonytail's competing product. At meetings with multiple potential customers Tonytail was then, in fact, turned down.
